Sorry for ghosting you - this is my busy teaching term.

I still have some ideas - there is the journal of labour economics and possibly the journal of population economics.

I'll resubmit to these when I have the chance to check the required formatting details.

Hope all goes well with you

Best wishes
Caroline

You don't often get email from bjiredoffice@wiley.com. Learn why this is important

Dear Dr. Caroline Emberson ,

Thank you for submitting your manuscript "Quantifying hidden exploitation: Dual method prevalence estimates of labour exploitation among domestic workers in the United Kingdom" to our journal. After careful assessment, we have made the decision not to consider your manuscript for publication in British Journal of Industrial Relations. In this case the paper is underdeveloped theoretically for a general IR journal like BJIR and is better suited perhaps to a more specific UK focused journal like IRJ or similar.

We appreciate you considering British Journal of Industrial Relations for the publication of your research.

Kind regards,
J. Ryan Lamare
British Journal of Industrial Relations
